Statement of Purpose

What initially fished me into the medical field arose from childhood intrigue into the intricacies of diseases that affect the human body and study of biological sciences. This interest flourished greatly as I pursued further medical education, where I was intimately attracted to topics that explored medicine for various chronic diseases like cancer, heart attacks, and diabetes as a full career path. I have endorsed to explore multiple activities to genuinely test this burning desire, all of which have further reinforced my aspiration to delve into the medical field. As a result of these unique personal experiences, my desire to pursue the complexities and intricacy of human biology has substantially doubled. Therefore, I firmly believe the XXX university will help me hone my professional competencies and ultimately contribute to the development of my professional skills.

As part of my undergraduate studies, I did my Bachelor's degree in Biology with a minor in Biotechnology from the XXX University in Puerto Rico. I attained an outstanding performance with a cum laude GPA estimate of 3.87. As a student, I was an associate of Pre-med Association and an active member of the board of the association, which was entitled to facilitate the academic and personal growth of university students.

I have always been a sincere worker, dedicated towards patient care, academically inclined, and one who respects and values the bedside mannerism required in being an internist. I believe medicine is learned at the bedside, and each patient is your teacher. After my graduation, I joined the XXX institution, where I worked as a research technician for six months, and I was lucky enough to enhance my competencies in laboratory techniques. I immensely enjoyed this informative period, including meeting several doctors and patients' who some had suffered from terminally ill disease and required specialized palliative care. This brief experience indeed expanded my horizon in a field that I am extremely attracted to.

Ultimately, been in part of such advancement in education and technology where I was able to polish my clinical skills as a doctor inspired me never to stop learning, and each step helped me to revise various fields of medical education and simultaneously develop an evidence-based approach towards improving my reasoning as a medical practitioner. Through shadowing, I admired the standardized way in which doctors would screen their patients. Besides, my exposure to several cultures, cuisines, and lifestyles made me become a well-rounded individual. Working at San Lucas, a melting point of various cultures, was highly instructive and educative to me. It was also an enthralling life episode to be part of such interaction with people from multiple cultural settings as each patient encounter involved a comfortable level of communication concerning cultural diversity.

In addition to my practical experiences and academic backgrounds, I was raised to regard voluntary work as an obligation rather than a choice. Therefore, it is my firm intention to give some of my time and skills to underserved people throughout my career. This motivation led me to participate in several community services, with the aim of supporting humanity, including supporting those affected by the current pandemic, COVID-19. Therefore, as I stand between residency threshold and medical career, I am confident that your esteemed institution will offer me a fulfilling experience both intellectually and personally to be an excellent doctor who practices and teaches concepts of medicine with a blend of wisdom, compassion, and scholarly expertise to optimally heal the world.

I possess the resilience, communication acumen, and outside-the-box mental power to excel as a valuable asset in any medical team. Therefore, I seek admission to this medical program that will endow me with solid practical excellence as a doctor and extensive clinical experience in all out and inpatient clinical settings. I am confident enough that this program will provide me with requisite skills of diagnosing and treating various health problems and consequently becoming a direct contributor to the enhancement of medical society. The program will also be a milestone in the realization of my long-term goal, which is to become a professional doctor and effectively help patients recover from various diseases. I believe that I have consistently worked towards this goal, both through my academics and volunteer work.

Therefore, I look forward to the program and hope that you will positively consider my application.
